Pop stall fizzles out over new market

Sarsaparilla sellers will decide their future after site opens

By CATHERINE PYE

The family behind Blackburn's long-standing sarsaparilla stall have decided against moving into the new market – for now.

Teresa Barnes took over R Walsh and Co when her husband, Peter, died at the age of 66 in December.

Mrs Barnes, 57, said: "It's closed down at the moment, but it's not closed for good. It's dormant while I see how the new market does."

Worker Kieran Dawe was featured in the council's promotional material for the new £8million market, which is due to open in May – three months later than intended – on the ground floor of the Church Street shopping centre extension.

Mr Dawe has now been let go. There will be 61 food stalls, 50 non-food stalls, nine café or catering stalls, and six mini-shops at the new market.

The council said two-thirds of the pitches had already been allocated, both to existing and new traders.

But many stallholders have decided to leave town rather than make the move, due to the increased trading days and need to commit to three years.

Rents have been reduced to compensate traders for the delay.

But Mrs Barnes said: "Three years is a big commitment.

"It's a big risk, so I want to see how the new market goes before any commitment.

"If it is a success, then maybe our stall will reopen there."

Mr Barnes, who lived in Lammack Road, Blackburn, began work on the stall, which was first opened in King Street, as an eight-year-old, moving barrels to earn pocket money.

His mum, Phyllis, also worked on the stall until she was 82.

When the original owner died, Mr Barnes took over, but he would never reveal the recipe for his sarsaparilla, which was brewed in nearby Hamilton Street.

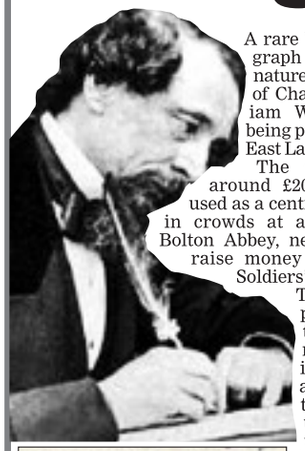
Famous names in autograph album



SIGNED IN: Author Charles Dickens and his signature in the album

A rare Victorian autograph book, with signatures from the likes of Charles I and William Wordsworth, is being put on sale by an East Lancashire dealer.

The album, worth around £20,000, is being used as a centrepiece to draw in crowds at a book fair at Bolton Abbey, near Skipton, to raise money for ABF The Soldiers' Charity.

The book was put together in the last century by a woman in the Midlands and has been in the same family until recently, when it was bought by Neil Summersgill, of Fine and Antiquarian Books, Mellor.

It contains 325 separate entries from icons including Charles I, William Wordsworth, Lord Tennyson, Isambard Kingdom Brunel, Charles Dickens, and Queen Charlotte.

ENTRY: William Wordsworth

By CATHERINE PYE

It also contains a letter by Methodist founder Charles Wesley describing his brother John being attacked by a mob.

Mr Summersgill is not donating the proceeds of the sale to charity, but delayed selling the book until the event, so that it could be used to draw in crowds for the fundraising event.

He said: "What is outstanding about this album is the number of letters that it contains.

"Many autograph albums contain mere signatures cut from letters which, whilst collectable in themselves, tell nothing of the writer.

"Letters, however, can be historically important, in which the writers give something of themselves, leaving an indelible impression, and they are far more valuable both historically and financially."

He added: "Most of today's autograph collectors seek sports and television celebrities, who are in the main ephemeral people soon to be forgotten. Authors, poets, artists, scientists, philosophers, thinkers, inventors and industrialists tend not to hog the limelight but, in the long run, it is they who will make their mark on history."

The book fair will be held at The Devonshire Arms Country House Hotel, Bolton Abbey, tomorrow (Thursday, March 3).

ABF The Soldiers' Charity, previously known as the Army Benevolent Fund, supports soldiers, former soldiers and their families in times of need.

BEFORE: Anthony as he was

Anthony wins battle of bulge

By EMMA CRUCES

A super slimmer shed seven stone after his doctor told him he would not see his next birthday.

Anthony Billington, 60, took 12 months to go from 19 stone to 12 stone, shrinking his waist from 50 to 38 inches. He now says more men should join slimming clubs after advice and support from others helped him beat a 35-year battle with his weight in 12 months.

The former engineer from Blackburn, who is 5ft 8in, said in recent years he needed a mobility scooter as short distances left him out of breath.

He was at a high risk of heart attacks and strokes. High blood pressure and cholestoerol also caused nose bleeds, dizzy spells and fainting. He said: "The doctor basically said: 'Change your lifestyle, or buy yourself a coffin'. Even after that warning I wasn't making very much progress on my own. My wife's friend went to Slimming World and they told me I was being taken out for the night – without telling me where. I ended up at a Slimming World class and the rest is history."

SLIM: Anthony now

At Slimming World he has won 24 awards after giving up his favourite meal of fried chicken from fast food takeaways, and he no longer drinks.

Slimming World leader Janet Brown oversees the Church and Oswaldtwistle Cricket Club group Anthony belongs to.

She said: "It just shows you it's never too late."

Girl's distress at raid on allotment

By CATHERINE PYE

A disabled girl has been left 'distraught' after a 14ft polytunnel put up by her late father was stolen during the night.

Caitlin Jones, 15, helped father Nigel build the polytunnel over four days, just before he was diagnosed with lung cancer three-and-a-half years ago. Now all that remains on the allotment plot near her home, in Somerset Avenue, Darwen, is the door.

Mum Tracy said: "Some swine has been on to our plot during Thursday night and Friday morning and taken all three sides.

"It was the last thing Nigel did before he died, and Caitlin has not stopped crying. She's distraught. They've unscrewed everything and taken two locks off. What a rotten thing to do.

"Caitlin's been through so much and was looking forward to getting it ready for the new growing season."

To make matters worse, Mrs Jones has been told a new household insurance policy she took out no longer covers equipment on her allotment. She said: "That's a £600 polytunnel and I can't afford to replace it."

Witton Park High School pupil Caitlin was born with a rare genetic disorder called Goldenhar Syndrome, which means she is hearing-impaired, autistic, has special educational needs, asthma and has also recently been diagnosed with a heart condition.

She said: "I helped my dad build it and I really want it back. It took us four days to do it.

"I have grown tomatoes in it in the past and enjoyed it."

Caitlin has raised over £10,000 for cancer charities by organising fund-raising events and completing tasks after losing her father two days after her 12th birthday in February 2008. He was 46.

Renewed safety call at junction

By EMMA CRUCES

A campaigning lollipop lady said a busy junction was worse than ever, with drivers regularly jumping red lights.

Linda Lavender's campaign to introduce traffic calming at the Rishton junction of Blackburn Road and Harwood Road was last year backed by more than 800 parents. Now Rishton's county councillor Miles Parkinson is urging Lancashire County Council to make sure work goes ahead 'before there is a fatality'.

Mrs Lavender, 53, claimed drivers frequently 'tried to run her down' as she tried to stop traffic for children. She said verbal abuse on the road has even seen drivers shout 'Hitler' at her. Mrs Lavender said the current sequence of traffic lights gave her no opportunity to cross.

Councillors, parents and Mrs Lavender are calling for a dedicated crossing which would give her more control.

The crossing guard who helps children attending St Charles' Primary, St Peter and Paul's Primary, and First Class Nursery, said she had heard nothing from the county council in response to the petition, even though it was submitted last May.

She said: "I was so pleased to be backed by so many people, but it has been months and still nothing is happening. People see what I have to put up with and think I'm crazy to stick it out. I have to jump out of the way of cars, but I am not going anywhere. I do it for the kids."

County Coun Parkinson said: "We don't have many lollipop ladies left and we don't want to lose the ones we have. We want to stress to the county that it needs to be top of the list before there is a fatality."

No-one from the county council was available to comment.

Potholes 'disgrace'

Darwen Mayor Paul Browne has called for urgent action to repair potholes on two busy roads. The Sudell Lib Dem highlighted part of Robin Bank and the A666, at Whitehall, as needing immediate attention. He said: "The A666 is a main road and it's an absolute disgrace. Also, Robin Bank, near Heys Lane, is cracking up quickly and is damaging cars."

RAISING FUNDS: Tattooist Lee Moore

Charity in the p-ink!

By EMMA CRUCES

A family have drummed up more than £800 for Cancer Research with special tattoos and a fund-raising evening.

Clayton-le-Moors father and son Sean and Lee Moore, who run Moore Ink, in Whalley Road, designed permanent charity badges for the charity bid.

Lee says the idea to begin fund-raising came from his wife Gemma, who also organised a special fund-raiser at the Oaklea Tavern, with a raffle and auction.

The couple have also previously raised funds in memory of Gemma's best friend, Leyland woman Karen Faulkner, who died of cancer, by asking guests at their wedding last year to donate, instead of giving gifts.

Their latest efforts have raised £818 for the charity, and seen dozens of women tattoed with pink ribbon designs.

Lee said: "Gemma did everything for the fund-raising evening and did an amazing job. Also it was all her idea in the first place.

"People are still asking for charity tattoos, so we will keep doing them for the time being."

Melvyn looks at reel history

Later this year author and broadcaster Melvyn Bragg, 71, well known for presenting The South Bank Show, will host new BBC2 series The Reel History Of Britain, examining how life in Britain used to be.

60 SECONDS WITH ... MELVYN BRAGG

TELL US ABOUT THE REEL HISTORY OF BRITAIN

In my view it's also the 'real' history of Britain because, for the first time in human history – as big as that – the majority of people have a chance to say what their place in history is; what they did. Now, because of the arrival of film and the making of archives – which have been kept at the BFI and the BBC and various other places – and because of people's own films and because of photography and the photographs they have and people keeping diary entries, we can bring together what is the real history of this country.

WILL YOU CONTRIBUTE ANY OF YOUR OWN FOOTAGE?

I'm not going to because it isn't about me. It's very much about other people. I'm just the enabler, I'm the kind of ear and the off-screen listener to people and what they have to say. It's people's history. That's the whole drive of it.

CAN YOU REVEAL ANY HIGHLIGHTS, OR IS IT STILL A WORK IN PROGRESS?

It is a work in progress, but some of the highlights are some of the documentaries, which are astonishing. You get some wonderful films of coal mining, which are just so raw. You look at these heroic men; you only see them for three or four minutes, you think: "God, they walked two miles to get there to do that. They did that for eight hours and then they walked back". We're after contributions from people. We're looking for bits of film, or photographs. They'll be well taken care of by the BBC.

Rocker moves on

By KATE TURNER

Not many people can boast playing drums for the likes of The Move, Electric Light Orchestra and Black Sabbath.

But for rocker Bev Bevan these are just some of his many claims to fame. Others include touring with Jimi Hendrix, and working with the likes of Jools Holland, Lisa Stansfield, Olivia Newton John, The Everly Brothers, and Rick Astley.

He is back on the road with former band member of The Move, Trevor Burton, and they are stopping off at The Grand, Clitheroe, tomorrow (Thursday), along with newest members Phil Tree on bass, Neil Lockwood on keyboards, and Gordon Healer on lead guitar. They will be playing alongside John Steel and Micky Gallagher, members of '60s supergroup The Animals in their latest incarnation Animals and Friends. "We are looking forward to coming to Clitheroe. It's somewhere we haven't been before and hopefully we will have a few hours to have a look around," said Bev, now 65, who hails from Warwickshire. "It's great working with Animals and Friends. They are really great guys and together I think we put on a good show."
